ORT WELLS WINNING TIDAL STAKES.

FIVE FAVORITES LOSE IN BIG DAY'S SPORT AT SHEEPSHEAD BAY

Delhi, 3 to 5 Chance in Rich Tidal Stakes, Is Beaten by Ort Wells and Waterside, Top-Heavy Choice in the Foam, Runs Third.

Jockey Hildebrand Rides the Winners AMERICAN DERBY of Both Feature Events, Workman and Armenia, Four in All and in Succession.

od, high-class sport is always a magnet for the turfites was well proven again here to-day, for the crowd that the Coney Island Jockey Club entertained was in number pretty close to that which gathered Suburban day. It majority of the bettors, be they plungers or pikers, contributed liberally to the horde of the layers, all were willing to vote the day's sport a success.

The day's results proved exceedingly disastrous to the followers of form. Just what they counted on failed to happen, and good things went astray with a regularity that was as bewildering as costly, the first winning favorite being Armenia in the fifth event Most costly of the day's upsets was the defeat of Delhi in the Tidal Stakes and of Waterside in the Foam. Both were at odds on and carried heavy stable commissions. The Tiday stakes went to Ort Wells, from the sta-ble of John A. Drake. It was generally supposed that he would not go the distance, a mile and a quarter, and this helped to encourage the faith of the all the running but won going away with the "sure thing" Waterside third. Hildebrand rode both the stake winners, Armenia and Workman, making four victories for the afternoon.

100 to 1 Shot Benten a Hend.

The betting in the second shifted about at a rate that was puzzling and shout at a rate that was puzzling and shally settled down with Mineola and Gold Money equal favorites at 13 to 5. When they broke they were badly strung out, with Gold Money at the rear end of the line. Dimple and Gray Friar at once set out to make the running and a merry pace they made of it. Rounding the turn for home there was a general closing which left the result in doubt to the end. The decision was in favor of Sheriff Bell by a length and a half. Gray Friar lasted long enough to beat Roehampton a head for the place.

THE WINNERS.

Lincroft carried the bulk of the plungers' money, for all his form warranted the play. But when it came to racing he was never prominent. He broke well, but soon dropped back in the ruck, where he finished. Jack McKeon, a 100-to-1 shot, led a close bunch to the main track, where Workman joined him and the two fought it out to the end, with the last named the winner by a head. Jack McKeon, who was stopping some, beat Ike S. a neck, with Harpoon a close fourth.

Sherif Bell Wins Again.

The betting in the second shifted about at a rate that was puzzling and finally settled down with Mincola and fi Armenia Wins Ensily. Armenia Wins Easily.

Armenia was the hope of the losers in the fifth race and this time calculations proved correct. The price, 8 to 5, looked liberal and that is what it was. She worked clear of her field in a dozen strides after breaking in front and it was plain sailing to the end, where she was an easy winner by half a length from Dick Bernard, who beat Martinmas a like distance for the place.

20 to 1 Shot Wins. The favorite in the third race, Waterside, was heavily played by those who look for certainties, and they accepted 1

Dalesman, who was heavily played for the closing event just failed to land Gold Dome, a 20 to 1 chance, in a furious drive beating him a head. Grace ful, who made most of the running was third at Dalesman's head.

The absence of "Bookies" and the tip sters from the course made the day end with a crowd that began to arrive Highball got off well and was second for the first mile. He then went to the front and was never caught.

Highball is the first Eastern colt to win the Derby. Rapid Water, another Easterner, was third. The horse that ran the most remarkable race was Woodson. He came from sixth position at the head of the stretch with a great burst of speed.

Fort Hunter got his head in front at the end of the first mile and then faded. Rapid Water was always well in all the way. Outside of the three that finished first, second and third, the two horses most prominent to the stretch were Fort Hunter and Moharib. English Lad came on in the stretch and passed both of them, getting fourth. Fox Hunter went back to eighth.

There was no such demonstration as would have greeted English Lad's victory, but it was an extremely true run race.

More Than One-Third of the Funerals Had to Be Postponed for Lack of Facilities Dirges and Requiems Over a Square Mile of Territory.

Miles of white and black crape, fluttering in the breeze, hearses laden with coffins, and open carriages laden with flowers, winding in and out through the crowded streets, sounds of sobbing and the mournful music of brass band stopping in front of each house of death and "playing the soul away" combined to make the Black Saturday of the east side i mournful memory to all who passed through it. Many sat, white faced and dumb with grief, and envied even those who rode behind the hearses. These were the surviving members of families from whom death in the Slocum disaster had snatched loved ones whose bodies have not been recovered. While the junerals from the homes of the known dead were moving out of Manhattan toward the burying ground preparations for a great funeral perhaps more pathetic were going on at the morgue. This was the funeral of the unidentified dead. Caskets for the bodies were seceived to-day-black caskets, covered with cloth for the adult corpses white caskets for the babies, of whom there are nine. All were burill in one grave in Lutheran Cemetery, and nine hearses will convey to coffins to their destinations.

UNIDENTIFIED DEAD BURIED. Fourteen hearses were required for the transportation of the unidentified dead from the Morgue to the cemetery. The long line of glasssided, sombre vehicles created a profound impression as it moved slowly down through First avenue and the devastated Ct. Mark's parish and out on to the Williamsburg Bridge. One carriage followed the hearses. carrying officers of the Health Department, who were ordered to make an accurate map of the great grave prepared for the bodies, so that if any are identified later by means of the clothing the coffin containing the remains may be readily found.
